Musha, my God, an what do ye call it? Frank Reade looked up with a pleasant smile, as a brick-colored head was thrust into the half-open doorway of the wood-shed, where he was hard at work putting the several parts of his invention together. Call it! said the sixteen-year-old genius, with a proud glance at his wonderful idea; why, I call it a steam horse. A harse, is it? It is, said Frank. Wid stale an iron legs, an a big copper belly on him? You re right. An can he walk? Yes, and run too. Worra, worra, did yez iver hear the loikes o that? cried the Irishman, throwing up his hands in astonishment. Would ye have the nateness to allow me to sthep in for a whist, while I obsarve the construction of the conthrivance? I can philosophize, and so forth, but be the smoke o Kate Kelly s pipe (be the same token, it was a rale black dudeen), this bates me philosophy, it do. Who are you? asked Frank. Patrick McSpalten s my name. Will yez allow me in? I suppose so, said Frank, and into the wood-shed walked the Irishman. He was a good-natured looking man of about thirty, pleasant-faced, well-dressed, and full of blarney. Arrah, it s a jaynus ye are, he said as he looked at Frank s invention. An do ye mane to tell me that you constructed that conthrivance all out of yer own head, me gossoon? Oh, no, grinned Frank. I use quite a quantity of steel, iron and copper. Oh, I didn t mane that, hastily said Patrick McSpalten. I want to know if...
