Is the Vienna Convention on international sale of goods too much influenced by civil law and should it contain a rule on the passing of property

By Benjamin Mahr

GRIN Verlag. Paperback. Condition: New. This item is printed on demand. 40 pages. Essay from the year 2004 in the subject Business economics - Law, printed single-sided, grade: Distinction (84), The University of Sydney (Faculty of Law), course: International Business Law, language: English, abstract: INTRODUCTION The Vienna Convention on International Sale of Goods The Vienna Convention is by far not the first attempt to harmonize international commercial code - there is a history of efforts to harmonization that goes back to the beginning of the 20th century. In 1930 the International Institute for the Unification of Private Law UNIDROIT was created in Europe. It developed its first draft sales law in 1935 and resumed its efforts in 1951 producing a draft commercial code which was circulated until the early 1960s. The first successful intermediate stage was reached, when in 1964 The Hague Conference adopted the Uniform Law for the International Sale of Goods ULIS and the Uniform Law for the Formation of Contracts ULF. High expectations accompanied the signing of the Hague Convention on Sales, but only a small number of countries ratified the Hague Convention and its application was strictly reduced to these member states. It was especially disappointing...
