Excerpt from Fitting Brush Conversion to San Gabriel Watersheds The coastal slopes of the San Gabriel mountains in southern California are wildlands on which intensive management is justified. These watersheds lie directly above heavily populated urban areas and highly developed industrial complexes. An adequate vegetation cover on the watersheds is valued for several reasons - primarily to protect against flood and erosion damage, but also to promote yield of local water and to provide recreation areas and wildlife habitat. About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books. Find more at This book is a reproduction of an important historical work.
