Excerpt from International Chamber of Commerce, Vol. 18: Brochure; Proceedings of the First Congress (London, June 27-July 1, 1921) The twenty-seven resolutions were adopted unanimously. Naturally the discussions which took place regarding some of these resolutions manifested at the outset different points of view, but there was no single case in which these obstacles prevented the members attending the Congress from arriving at a definite agreement. Emphasis may be laid upon this fact, since it demonstrates the genuine success of the Congress and at the same time is typical of the character of this new Institution.
