Excerpt from Substance of a Discourse: Preached at Wilbraham, Mass;; On Occasion of the Death of Rev. Edward Hyde, Who Fell Asleep in Christ, March 16, 1832 Huner was a most prominent trait in the character of the apostle Paul. Though among the most eminent and the most highly favored of God, of his or of any age, he esteemed himself least of all. This low estimate of himself was not merely the result of his personal experience, as a child of God which grace he had, in common with other Christians - nor yet was it owing wholly to the deep conviction he had of his former guilt, on account of his having been a bloody persecutor, and by reason of which, he said, he was not meet to be called an apostle - hut his was the humilitjr of the minister of Christ, as well as of the disciple of Christ. This ministerial humility was the fruit of his deep con viction, that in all his labors and successes, (and who was more laborious and successful than Paul?) the excellency of the power was of God. Weighed in the balance with the truth of God and the power of the Holy Ghost, he found himself to be comparatively noth ing. As an exhibition of this feeling, hear him, while rebuking his brethren for their partial attachments to their favorite teachers, demanding, Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man? I have plant ed, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase. Sothen, neither is he that planteth any thing, neither he that watereth, but God that giveth the increase....
