Laura Berk, renowned professor and researcher in the field of human development, has revised this text with new pedagogy, a heightened emphasis on the interplay between biology and environment, and expanded coverage of biology, culture and social issues, while emphasizing the lifespan perspective of development. What readers are saying: 'Students would love this book - it's a joy to read! While Berk offers salient and up-to-date information rooted in a solid research base, she does not excessively weight discussion with jargon. Rather, she beautifully illustrates concepts through rich examples.' - Edythe H Schwartz, California State University-Sacramento. 'Berk's coverage of topics in this chapter (17) is far superior to what appears in the leading social gerontology textbooks. The material is presented in a much clearer and interesting format by Berk. She has excellent writing skills and relates very well to students. - Dale A Lund, San Diego State University. 'There is a fluidity in the writing style that is superior to other textbooks I have examined. - Karl Hennig, St Francis Xavier University. 'Extremely well-written with a good balance between being readable, accessible, and yet presenting the complexities of studying human behavior.' - Laurie Gottlieb, McGill University. 'the students like it and actually read it. They enjoy the vignettes, which encourage application to real life situations.' - Nancy White, Youngstown State University. 'an excellent survey of classic and contemporary work. It is very impressive in its comprehensiveness yet it also benefits from a fluidity of exposition that is remarkable.' - Dana Plude, University of Maryland, College Park. 'Berk's style of writing is very clear and easy to understand. My...
