PHONETICS IN PROSTHODONTICS

LAP Lambert Academic Publishing Feb 2018, 2018. Taschenbuch. Condition: Neu. Neuware - The power of communication has given the human beings the ability to process the gathered information and use it for his own advantage. The older methods of conveying his messages through vocal sounds, have now advanced into a meaningful speech which is a biologic function of the maxillofacial structures. Besides all the other functions of the oral cavity like deglutition, mastication and patency of airway, which are common to all the species, speech has enabled man to reach the pinnacle of animal kingdom which makes him superior and different from the others. Speech as basic and fundamental means of communication has become the corner stone for establishment and organization of the society. In this highly complexed international society of today, with the sophisticated systems for transmitting the voice, the spoken words have become increasingly important in establishing and maintaining a niche in the social structure. Man is not only judged by what he says, but equally by the way he says. 88 pp. Englisch.
