Excerpt from The Dublin Journal of Medical Science, Vol. 68: July to December, 1879 Fellow and Professor of Hygiene and Chemistry, Royal College of Surgeons; Medical Officer of Health for Dublin, c. About Christmas, 1878, several cases of typhoid fever occurred in houses situated in Raglan-road and Elgin-road, Pembroke Town ship, a suburb of Dublin. Towards the end of January circumstances led me to investigate the cause of the outbreak. I was not long in discovering that all the households affected were supplied with milk from a particular dairy, and also that the owner of the dairy had been ill with fever since the middle of December. I subsequently ascertained that two children had been ill with fever of some kind during December, and that all the patients had remained in a small house attached to the dairy.
